Greetings Complexly!

As a writer/producer with a curious mind, I'm excited about the Freelance Fact-Checker position at SciShow, which I heard about through Christie Wilcox's post on a Facebook group. I love learning about how things work, and I would be thrilled to collaborate with and support the SciShow team.

I have fact-checking experience, as well as other skills that will be beneficial to your team:

* I've fact-checked for publications such as Entertainment Weekly, Los Angeles magazine, TakePart, and Gayot Publications.

* I'm a strong writer, with published articles in digital journalism outlets such as Los Angeles magazine, Los Angeles Times, LA Weekly, New York Observer, Hello Giggles, The Billfold, and The Toast, among others.

* I produced some of my own docu-style videos, including a video segment for Playboy.com about the Naked & Afraid visual effects team, and a full-length DVD on social dancing in the early 20th century.

* I founded and direct a group for women and gender non-binary writers, organizing monthly meetings with speakers and experts, and building a supportive writing community.

I'm excited to talk to you more about how I can benefit the Complexly team.

Thanks for your consideration!

Sincerely,

Renée Camus
